

WAITING.

...sired.
...the old high chair,
...against the window,
...the air?
...then why remain there?
...mamma's yet to come,
...Still she's waiting
...mamma home.

...till the nightfall
...of all the hill,
...with patient watching
...the snow pillow
...sweety resting
...cold window-sill,
...her head is lying,
...of mamma still.

...are soon around her,
...she's borne to bed,
...snow pillow
...her tired head.
...but all unconscious
...presence at her side,
...anxiously is watching,
...her blue eyes wide.

...stares around her,
...mamma, long and loud,
...that she is pushing
...a great and rushing crowd,
...but all is useless,
...mamma now is near,
...she's lost forever,
...eyes are all a tear.

...brow grows hotter,
...accents from her come,
...cries to God in Heaven
...to come and take her home.
...is waiting, watching,
...God to spare her child,
...for on the night air
...again her cries so wild.

...down upon them
...come—the baby's still,
...beside the bedside,
...is heard but mock bird's trill.
...will you tire with waiting
...home that God has given?
...and your mamma's spirit
...will welcome into Heaven.

COLORED LABOR IN THE SOUTH.

New Orleans Picayune.]

The mass of the colored people in the South usually regard white men who flatter them, make deceitful promises to them, drink whiskey with them and give them whiskey as their friends, while their best friends who tell them the truth and give them good advice they deem as foes. I am going to give the colored people a little truth and sound advice, as I understand it; and as I do not own a store nor a sugar plantation and am not a candidate for office, and have no favors to ask this race, it makes not the least difference to me, whether they accept or reject my advice, whether they consider me wise or unwise.

The greatest mistake the colored man now makes is spending so much of his money for whiskey, and wasting so much money in gambling. One of these vices leads to another, and both together lead to ruin. They lead to idleness, and idleness destroys wages and leads to other vices.

The next great mistake which they deem a very sharp thing, is claiming high wages from the planter, and at the same time giving him unreliable labor and proving himself to be an enemy to the planter's best interests.

If the colored laborer could get $5 a day he would spend most of it for whiskey, gambling and dissipation; he would not work more than two days in a week if he could get $10 for two days. He would soon be so steeped in dissipation and crime that the planter would be compelled to look elsewhere for another kind of laborer, or abandon his plantation to briars and saplings, and let his sugar machinery be eaten up by rust, as has been the case in the island of Jamaica. And the negro should inform himself about the fate of St. Domingo agriculturists, when the white men ceased to direct it.

Besides, the soil that can pay a demoralized man $25 to $30 a month the year around, summer and winter, will attract white labor just as sure as the sun continues to rise and set. It is attracting white men here now. White farmers are coming to this State from Kansas and Illinois and other Western States. A few years ago Western immigrant farmers and mechanics, poured into Texas from States north of the Ohio river, tens of thousands of Germans from across the water. Not long ago a leading German of New Orleans informed me that the Germans conclude that Louisiana is nearly ripe for immigrants from their country, and that when they do start they will pour in by thousands as they did in Texas. Immigration fever is raging. At one time the Iowa fever was raging and Iowa was soon full of farmers. At another time it was Illinois, or Oregon, etc. Louisiana will have her turn next and then the colored people will wonder where all these white men came from; then they will only see that the white man has been doing; that he never intended that war should emancipate so beautiful a land as Louisiana to relapse into jungles and barbarism.

It is to-day the opinion of some farmers, lawyers, judges and business men that it would be the most fortunate event for the sugar planters of Louisiana if the colored laborers of the parishes would put their labor up to at least $5 a day the year around and stick to it as long as possible. Then, at such wages, they would become such a worthless race of drunkards that they would be worthless to the farmers, while good white farmers perfectly reliable, could be brought here in tens of thousands to take the place of played-out negroes.

White men are moving in this direction now with the understanding that lands in Louisiana pay $1 a day for labor, in some instances $1.25, when they know that no such wages can be obtained on any farm or plantation the year around in any part of the globe. As soon as it can be known in Castle Garden, in Europe and the Western States, that the best farm hands can get $360, a year cash for their labor, they will prepare to come in this direction like buffaloes on the plains. The very fact that these lands yield more profits, than any other lands on this continent, will attract farmers hither to buy lands and sell sugar cane by the ton; also to work by the month, or on the share system, and on numerous plans until they find out which is the best plan, and, on the Darwin principle, "the fittest will survive"—the tramps and loafers and drunkards will be weeded out and smoked out. Perhaps a vagrant law will be enacted requiring vagabonds who have "no visible means of support," to wake up and make themselves useful. The colored people are crafty in getting the largest amount of wages from the white planter for the smallest amount of labor, but their craftiness is short-sighted, and usually leads to their ultimate disadvantage, and often to their ruin.

The white man kidnapped the negro in Africa and brought him across the water and made out of him a slave, the white man now furnishes him employment, shelter and food, and will use him as long as he can make him profitable, and when colored labor plays out and there is no money in the negro, then the white man will doubtless get rid of him as he has of the Indian. The white man is too strong and too far-seeing for the negro to compete with and the negro can only occupy the position in this country which the Spanish moss holds to the cypress—they cannot thrive separated from the tree to which they cling nor can the negro thrive when he cuts loose from the white man. The white man will be the negro's friend as long as he can make him useful, but will abandon him to his fate when he becomes worthless. The only hope of the colored man is to cultivate the friendship of the white man and make himself useful to them, claim only honest wages and never attempt to become a white man or to be a white man's master.

ORIGIN OF POPULAR PHRASES.

Written for the Globe-Democrat.]

PRINCE OF CHARLATANS.—A name given to Paracelsus, who was styled by himself the "King of Physic." Although he professed to have discovered the "Elixir of Life," it did not seem to have been efficacious in his own case, for he died at the early age of 48 years.

NOTHING, IF NOT CRITICAL.—The quotation.

For I am nothing, if not critical.

is from Shakespeare's Othello, Act i., scene 3. A striking illustration of the aptitude of the saying is given by the remarks of a German critic in explaining the text of one of Shakespeare's own comedies—"As You Like It."

Tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in everything,

he made this comment: "The lines as they now stand are manifestly wrong. No one ever found books in the running brooks, or sermons in stones. But a slight transposition of words reduces the passage to sense. Shakespeare's meaning is clear, and what he meant he must have written. The passage should read thus—

Stones in the running brooks,
Sermons in books, and good in everything.

CARRYING COAL TO NEWCASTLE.—An old North of England phrase, which finds its parallel in the Persian taunt of "Carrying pepper to Hindostan," and in the Hebrew, "To carry oil to the City of Olives."

DOWN UPON YOUR MARROW-BONES.—The expression, "I'll bring him down upon his marrow-bones," is frequently heard, meaning "I'll make him bend his knees as he does to the Virgin Mary. Supposed to be from Mary Bones, an objectionable term used by the Protestants in reference to the supposed adoration of the Virgin Mary by the Catholics.

APPLE-PIE ORDER.—A few years ago the origin of this phrase was the subject of discussion in London Notes and Queries. The most probable derivation is that which attributes it to a corruption of alpha beta order, that is alphabetical order; but even this is doubtful.

COWARD.—According to Edwards this word is derived from cour, the tail, in allusion to the fact that most animals when frightened put the tail between their legs. Some have thought it a corruption of "cow-herd," and say that it was a term of reproach used by the Normans to the Anglo-Saxons; but this is improbable, because the term of "cow-herd" is pure Saxon, and would not be likely to be familiar to the Norman invaders. Coward in heraldry is applied to "a lion or other beast having his tail hanging between his hind legs."

"JACK-A-NAPES.—Sharon Turner, in his "History of England," Vol. III., p. 80 says that in the British Museum is a ballad of the date 1480, referring to the Duke of Suffolk and his friends in most offensive terms. It designates the Duke of Suffolk by the cant name of "Jack-napes," and is perhaps the earliest instance discovered of the abusive application of the word "jack-napes." Lexicographers derive this word from Jack and nape, but the ballad shows that "napes" was a term of derision signifying a knave, and is, therefore, the Saxon cnapp, which bore also this meaning. If this be so, it will explain why the third figured card is called "Jack" and also "knave," and proves that Jack-napes meant Jack the knave.

JOHANNES FACTOTUM.

GRAHAM PUDDING.—Mix well together one-half cup of molasses, one-quarter of a cup of butter, one egg, one-half cup of milk, one-half a teaspoonful of soda, one-half cup of good Graham flour, one small teaspoonful of raisins, spices to taste. Steam four hours and serve with brandy or wine sauce, or any sauce that may be preferred. This makes a showy as well as a light and wholesome dessert, and has the merit of simplicity and cheapness.

YELLOW FEVER may not scourge the country this summer; but thousands of children will die from Cholera Infantum, Diarrhea, Worms and other Bowel Disorders, unless they take Dr. MOFFETT'S TERTHINA (Teething Powder).

Dr. MOFFETT'S TERTHINA allays irritation and makes Teething easy, and not a period of suffering and dread. For sale by Byron Lenly.

Butter a pudding dish, and line the bottom and sides with slices of cake (sponge cake is best), pare and slice thin a large pineapple; then strew with sugar, then more pineapple, and so on until it is all used. Pour over it small teaspoonfuls of water, and cover with slices of cake which have been soaked in cold water; cover the whole with a buttered dish, and bake slowly for two hours.

Overfeeding Animals.

The overfeeding of an animal is productive of quite as much loss as it is not to feed enough. It results in the derangement of the digestive organs, the loss of appetite, and finally the loss of flesh. An animal thus injured cannot be brought to a good condition as can one that has grown poor by feeding half rations. A hog that has once been overfed is rarely ever brought back to a good, healthy condition. In fattening hogs great care should be taken to never give them more than they will readily destroy. Whenever a hog fails to eat at once what is placed before him, it should be taken away. While it may not be as important to make other farm stock eat up all that is fed out, it is never good policy to permit food to lay before any animal, after it has satisfied its appetite. We have always noticed that successful feeders of cattle are particular to clean out the cribs as soon as the cattle have done eating.

LADIES can secure a smooth complexion and sweet breath by purifying the blood with Parker's Ginger Tonic.

Removing the Horns from Calves.

"A Stockman," in the Rural New Yorker recommends the removal of the horns from young calves, saying that the pain caused the animal by the operation is insignificant. It is very easily done when the young horns first become conspicuously prominent under the skin. The skin over the horn is the covering which afterward grows to be the outer and insensible casing of the horn; that in fact, which is called the horn. The true horn lies under this, and can be easily removed by raising a flap of the skin and cutting it out. It may be done in a minute, and a little plaster of tar over the cut protects the slight wound, which soon heals. This plan has more to recommend it than the brutal practice of disfiguring two and three-year old animals, carried on in this country and Scotland.

OVER 100,000 boxes of DR. MOFFETT'S TERTHINA (Teething Powder) will be sold this year, and thousands of children will be saved from an untimely grave. For sale by Byron Lenly.

A WOMAN is not to be chosen as a physician, or taboos as one, because she is a woman; the aptness, the learning, the skill, are all. There is an especial fitness in having women physicians in a great number and variety of cases, which sensitive men, no less than sensitive women, are more and more coming to appreciate. The profession now happily embraces qualified women as well as men. Its schools and societies should be open to both on equal terms.—Boston Herald.

CHILDREN often wake in the night with a burning fever, and the parent is at a loss to divine the cause. Worms! Worms! are at work. A dose of Shiner's Indian Vermifuge is the only remedy.
